AGAINST THE SPRINGS ROAD.

The Chancellor Decides Against the Brandy-wine Springs Rail-way From Laying Their Rails on Sixth Street.

the Brandywine Springs Road, besides Attorney Hilles and Wilhard Saulsbury for the contending railways.

Chancellor Nicholson this morning at 10 o'clock handed down his decision in the injunction suit of the Wilmington City Railway Company against the Wilmington and Brandywine Springs Railway Company.

The bill in this case was filed on November 24, 1899, and prays as follows: That the said respondent, the Wilmington and Brandywine Springs Railway Company, may fully and truly answer this bill of complaint, but not under eath, the same being hereby expressly warned.

That the said respondent, its successors, officers, employes, workmen, contractors, agents, deputies, and attorneys, may be restrained by the injunction of this Honorable Court, from locating, constructing, operating or maintaining a city railway within the city limits of the city of Wilmington; from cutting, tearing up or removing the tracks of your orator, from interfering with, cutting or removing the tracks of your orator, or any portion thereof, and from operating or attempting to operate its railway, except in accordance with the terms of the contract hereinbefore set forth, etc.

The respondent filed its answer January 3, 1900. Affiliavits have been presented and read on both sides and the questions involved, argued by counsed upon the motion for a preliminary injunction, with extraordinary injunction, w ANNUAL MUSICAL.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the best remain for all broughtal affections, It is a cough or cold to the Brandywine Springs Road entering the cive. He concludes his opinion with the following:

"The only fact in the case which I have not yet mentioned and commented upon, is that of the centract or traffic agreement between the respondent, the Brandywine Springs Railway Company and the formal and the loth of May, 1898. This agreement was made to continue for a period of 25 years and contained a stipulation on the part of the Brandywine Springs Railway Company, the Brandywine Springs Railway Company, that during that time it would not attempt to extend its tracks into or within the present limits of the city of Wilmington, and one of the grounds upon which complainant based his prayer for relief was to restrain the respondent from violating this stipulation.

The respondent's contention in reply to this was that the stipulation was ultra vires and also against public policy as being in restrain of competition and in this contention it is undoubtedly correct. It is well settled that a corporation has no power to deprive itself of a franchise accompanied by a public duty, such as the construction and operation of a railway, without express legislative sanction, and this the Brandywine Springs road did not possess. For although its original charter gave it the right to make a traffic agreement with the Wilmington City Railway, thegrant of the franchise to extend its line within the city of Wilmington was subsequent to that, and, therefore, could not be held to be included within the right.

It is also well settled that a corrotequity would not enforce a stipulation of this character by injunction.

of equity would not entorce a stipulation of this character by injunction.

The respondent based upon this contract the claim that by its complainant was estopped to deay the corporation existence of the Brandywine Springs Railway Company.

In regard to this contention it is only necessary to state that there could be no estoppal except as to matters arising out of the contract.

Although the case has been argued on a motion for a preliminary injunction, it could not have been discussed more thoroughly at a final hearing, and I have deemed it necessary to tie at the questions raised with the same thoroughness, because the reasons upon which I decide the motion for a preliminary injunction are the same as would control my decision in making a final decree.

The motion for a preliminary injunction is granted. Let the order be entered accordingly.
